Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Thursday 13 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Wet and breezy for most tonight.

This Evening and Tonight:
Scattered showers, heavy at times, will continue through the evening and overnight. These will gradually ease during the early hours, with the odd shower remaining possible. Breezy winds beginning to ease. Minimum temperature 7 deg C (45 deg F).

Friday:
A largely dry and cloudy day for many areas with scattered showers likely. Overnight, a more organised band of heavy showers will move in from the southwest affecting most areas. Maximum temperature 16 deg C (61 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
A band of rain will cross the region Friday night, then unsettled with sunshine and showers for the rest of this period. These showers heavy and possibly thundery at times.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.